“ I've spent many days reflecting on something to write that would pay a tribute to My cousin "Alley CAT" Alex. Then I saw something on the internet that reminded me that its not how many years you live but what you do with what you have. Many people have lived 100 years and can't say they did anything with that time. Alex was one person who enjoyed life to its fullest. He was a fun loving, considerate, caring person but he was not weak. Alex always fought for what he believed in. Something I admired in him. He went from being a crazy teen to learning how to make it on his own. Losing everything then fighting to build his empire, bigger, stronger and greater than he ever imagined. Alex was loved by many and he did so many wonderful things. I cherish the moments I got to spend with him. I wish they had been more. He traveled and had lots of hobbies like golfing, hunting, fishing and just plain boating. FAMILY was his number one priority. He loved his mom with all his heart I had to say that because he would of wanted me to. I would call him and try to make plans with him and he would say I'm in Vegas, I'm in New York I got this going on or that. He really made good time with what he had and enjoyed every minute of it. There is one thing I know that is making him proud right now. Alex always remembered how things used to be when we were children. How strong our family bond was before we lost one of our greatest Uncles who we all loved dearly. Death sometimes tears families apart but Alex through his passing, achieved what he always told me he wanted. It was his dream to unite the family and for us to love each other. I have to say for myself Alex you inspired me to contact my cousins more often and not take them for granted. There are other relationships that have been fixed by your love for us. You have taught us that life is too short to Bicker and hold grudges. I hope you are smiling upon us now Alex. You may not be here in the physical aspect but you will live on in our hearts and our memories forever. Thank you for all the good times and always being there to listen when I had a problem laying heavily on my heart. I love you Alex and will miss you immensely. Keep a space up there for me in Heaven as I know I will see you again.

“My heart is heavy with the loss of my friend Alex. When we met it was for business but we just had a connection and shared many good times laughing. I am reminded of a conversation we had about 3 years ago. He said to me that he wasn't sure if he died he would go to heaven. I then led him in a prayer to ask Jesus to come into his heart and I now take comfort knowing I will see him again. Alex had a heart that was as big as Texas and work ethic that is rarely found. I am thankful for the times we had together and I will keep his parents and family in my prayers. I look forward to the day that I will see his smiling face again and once again we will laugh! “ To our cousin Alex,
We should know enough about loss to realize that you never really stop missing someone-you just learn to live around the huge gaping hole of their absence. When you lose someone you love, you gain an angel you know.

*You will be forever in our hearts,

“ Paul, Mary, Anthony, Carlos, family n friends my deepest condolences on your loss. The loss of a family member that young is oh so hard. My prayer for the family is that our Lord Jesus Christ comfort your hearts and give you peace. One day we will be reunited with our loved ones that left us way too soon. On Wednesday Alex was face to face with his Father God and Jesus, who died for us on the cross; so we could have that promise?

“ I am very sorry about your loss of Alex please accept my condolences. The bible offers comfort that I really enjoy. At Revelation 21:3,4 God promises to bring an end to death. What a wonderful thought no more death along with Acts 24:15 a promise of a resurrection. With these beautiful thoughts from God we can look to the future with hope to see our loved ones again.
