“ Phil and I always enjoyed visiting with George and Martha. Whether coffee and doughnuts in the mornings, breakfasts from McDonalds, or Dinner at our house it has always been a pleasure to be with them. Also fun. George always had a great sense of humor. I like to tell them that they are more fun than a “Barrel of Monkeys”. Mostly on the quiet side, he always showed his concern and interest by asking how was the Traffic? How is the family? Did you win at the Casino? A couple of memorable experiences are one time that I was playing music at the Belen Fiestas and during the dance George must have danced with every lady there. Martha of course did not seem to mind. I imagine her thoughts are that’s okay that they dance and had a good time with him here, but tonight he is mine. Another time we had been at my house and we had dinner and a couple of drinks. Martha mentioned that it would be nice if we could go to the Casino. (Maybe it was George that suggested the Casino) So we went. At the Casino George was invited by friends, so he said, to have a couple of drinks. By the time we were ready to Leave, George was slightly inebriated. When we got to our house he was having trouble starting the car, so Theresa and I decided that maybe he should not drive home in his condition. So I drove George’s car and Theresa and Martha followed us in their car. When we got home we helped him inside and left. The Next time we went to their house Little George gave us a piece of his mind. He told us that him and Martha had such a hard time putting him to bed and that if this ever happened again, we would have to put him to bed. I am sure what he and Martha were talking about was the Navy Language that he used when he got a little high. Phil and Theresa Lucero PS Theresa says “Love you Georgie Porgie”
