“ I miss you now even though your mind has long been away. You're touch and presence was enough to comfort me in these last years. Your glance across the room pointing at me and saying "you're mine" was enough to know you still remembered. You gave all you could in ways only a mother would. Amongst many things I will forever remember our times sitting out on the porch in the rain, bundled in a blanket with your warmth, talking about things past and things to come. It was fitting that a rainy night woke me to come to your side and say goodbye. Rain that was like God's embrace wrapping around you to comfort you and take you home.
