“Dad you have always been an angel in disguise, from the time I can first remember you have always been there for me, I credit you and mom for every good thing I know and have learned. You showed me that all those times going to the baseball games weren't about baseball as much as they were about memory's, I will always hold dear those times we spent, and Carlos will hold those same memories of his father when he is able to understand as I do now.
